

Magic at the White Hart

On Wednesday evening last Mr. McCann the celebrated Ventriloquist and Illusionist gave his excellent entertainment in the large room at the White Hart Inn. Mr. McCann possesses great powers as a ventriloquist, the gems of his imitations combine voices from a lisping child to venerable age, from a mewling kitten to a snarling mastiff, from the tick of a watch to the noise of a workshop, the dialogue between the professor and the laughable old lady, Madame Spriggings, was most amusing; his magical tricks were exceedingly clever, and totally divested of vulgarity or immorality, in fact the whole of his feats were of a superior order and may be witnessed with delight by all classes of society.

Trowbridge and North Wilts Advertiser, 13 March 1858